POST LAUNCH QUESTIONNAIRE FOR REVIEWERS

Now that the Raid on Deerfield: The Many Stories of 1704 website is launched, we invite you to give us feedback on it. We will use your comments to make further revisions and refinements to the site before we complete it in the fall. At that time, we hope to have added several new scenes and a curriculum section. Unfortunately, due to budget constraints, we will not be able to offer you a gift for this user testing. Thank you in advance for any help you might be able to give us. Your feedback is instrumental in the design of this website.

1. Please tell us if you encountered any problems with the website in the following areas. If you did, please describe the problem in detail:

   • Technical problems (i.e., down-loading plug-ins, images appearing, speed of connection, text missing, missing links, links not working, sPlease include network connection, platform and browser information):

   • Clarity/accuracy of content/writing style:

   • Visual design/user interface (look and feel):

   • Ease of navigation (i.e., getting where you wanted to go, finding your way back, etc.):

2. What did you like best about the website?

3. What did you like least about the website?

4. How can we make the website better?

5. What did you learn from this website that you did not know before you visited the website?

6. If someone asked you what this website is about, you would probably tell them that it's about the raid on Deerfield and all the people involved in that event. What else would you tell them?

7. Suppose you were talking to someone and they told you they knew all about the raid on Deerfield but had never been to this website. Supposed they asked you "Do you think I will learn anything new if I go to the website?" What would you tell them?

8. BEFORE visiting this website, how aware were you of the different perspectives and viewpoints held by each of the groups present at the raid?

Very aware   Somewhat aware   Somewhat unaware   Very unaware

9. AFTER visiting this website, how aware are you of the different perspectives and viewpoints held by each of the groups present at the raid?

Very aware   Somewhat aware   Somewhat unaware   Very unaware

10. Has this website changed you and how you think about things in any way? If yes, please tell us how.